PROVIDENCE PERFUME Co

Artisan Natural Perfume

"Sir, I still have my illusions. When I smell a vanilla scented perfume, I naively want to believe that you've put vanilla in it; I hope that violet smells violet, and that the odor of tuberose will flow from its tight, perennially fragrant calyxes and not from a small, dirty, mineral residue. Chemist, know that we know it, come on, we know it all too well, your flowerbeds are covered by dew that is really tar and the shoots of your plants really coal ."

- Colette, Paysages.

"There is that moment when a perfumer hits an inflection point and their creativity takes an exponential jump upward . . . one perfumer I believe found herself on that upward trajectory is Charna Ethier of Providence Perfume Company. Osmanthus Oolong, Cocoa Tuberose and, my favorite of last year Rose Boheme are all examples of a creative vision at its most fierce."
Mark Behnke, Ca Fleure Bon

Moss Gown

BEST OF SCENT
Ca Fleure Bon
2012

Fall under the spell of Moss Gown. Created with the rarest of botanical essences, Moss Gown beckons with a swirl of green moss, the rustle of taffeta petals, a frisson of sandalwood. Verdant notes of sunflower and mimosa give way to a unique floral composition. Stunning Tasmanian boronia, rose, coffee flower and violet leaf are at the heart of this green, creamy floral. A base of powdered sandalwood and cedar moss complete the spell. A sophisticated natural luxury.

"Moss Gown by perfumer Charna Ethier of Providence Perfume Company takes us to magical green lands . . . on my mental perfume shelf I put Providence's Moss Gown right next to the wonderful Niki de Saint Phalle. That's high praise, I know, and I mean every word. The way Ms. Ethier composed and placed the velvety and dark mossy notes against the warmth of sunny Provençal fields is marvelous . . . I'd say that Moss Gown is a must-sample to those who miss the green and chypre perfumes of yore. And for those who dream about rolling down a very green hill on a sunny day, and reach the bottom laughing and full of joy."
Gaia Fishler, The Non-Blonde

Eva Luna

A spring green floral with fresh carrot, mint leaf, tuberose, mimosa and violet leaf resting on a base of Oman lemon frankincense and botanically derived musk seed. A walk in a moonlit garden.

"...Natural fragrances do have an allure and romance all their own, snd it's always a pleasure to encounter a natural perfume that delivers on its promise."
Angela at Now Smell This

Gypsy

Inspired by the children's book Madeline and the Gypsies. Exotic and rich, Gypsy dances on a tonka amber base with vetiver and entices with pink lotus flower, lavender, galangal, and blood orange. Smooth and unisex.

Hindu Honeysuckle

"Hindu Honeysuckle fits right into the Indian style of perfumery – rich, opaque, floral and forceful. On the days I wore Hindu Honeysuckle, I wanted to keep reapplying the scent (and book a flight to Delhi)." Kevin, Now Smell This

FEATURED IN W MAGAZINE

From India with love. Revered for its lush aroma, honeysuckle symbolizes generosity and kindness in India. Notes of Sweet Indian Jasmine Sambac, Vetiver, Botanical Musk Ambrette, and Coriander dance with Rose and Bergamot evoking the mystical honeysuckle flower. Be kind. Be generous. Be fragrant.

Cocoa Tuberose

A rich gourmand scent made with dark African cocoa, buttery white tuberose, tonka, vetiver and wormwood blended seamlessly. A bit of pink grapefruit refreshes. A comforting cashmere scent with a light woody pipe tobacco drydown.

"Charna's intention was to emphasize "the buttery nature of tuberose", wedded to a dark African cocoa absolute. What she achieved was exquisite balance. Cocoa Tuberose is intuitively composed; it makes all my instincts tingle."
Ida Meister, Fragrantica

Ginger Lily

Fresh ginger lily blended with rose, ylang ylang, bitter orange and clove on an amber base. Clean, invigorating, this unisex spiced oriental is a perennial favorite.

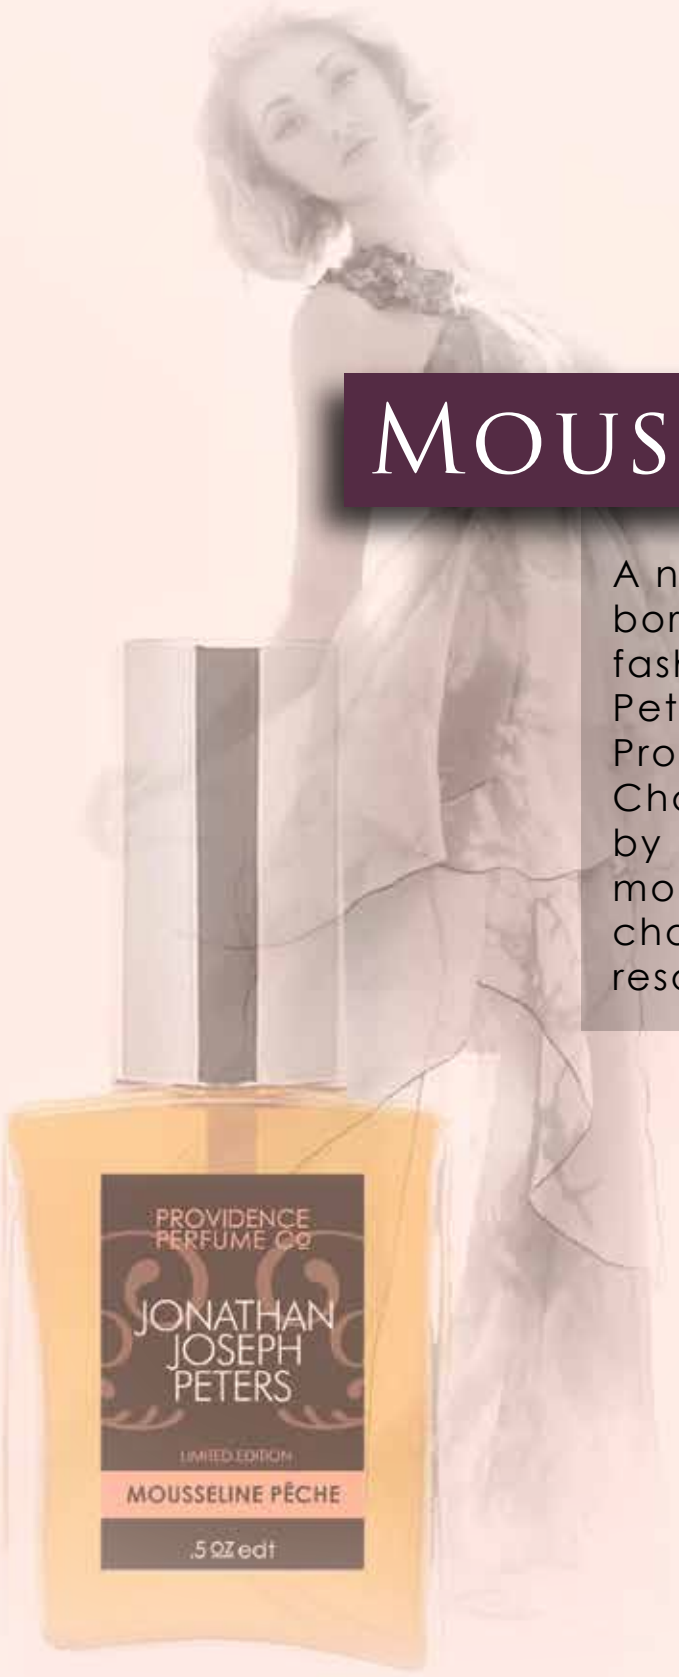
Branch & Vine

Inspired by a summer garden

Verdant leafy greens, a tangle of tomato vine. Hints of muguet mingle with mimosa, jasmine and cooling violet leaf. Unisex

Mousseline Pêche

A new limited edition eau de toilette born of the collaboration between fashion designer Jonathan Joseph Peters, of Project Runway and our Providence Perfume Co. perfumer Charna Ethier. A fragrance inspired by the softest, sheerest peach mousseline de soie, the fabric of choice for the designer's summer resort collection.



Osmanthus Oolong

Green, red and black teas blended with sparkling citrus scented aglaia blossoms, and golden Japanese osmanthus flower with its heady peach jasmine aroma. Tart and fruity middle notes give way to a sueded apricot base with a touch of leather. Lauded for its stunning aroma and sillage, Osmanthus Oolong is a must-try for tea lovers.

"Just minutes into wearing Osmanthus Oolong, its fruity floral nature unfurls amidst the warm tea blend. It becomes fleshy and sensual with the peachiness of the osmanthus blossom which is heightened by the apricot and peach tinctures. As the drydown progresses, the beeswax melds into frankincense and copaiba balsam, finally evolving into a honeyed resinous perfume that is as beautiful as it is intoxicating."
Trish Vawter, Scent Hive

CHARNA ETHIER

Providence Perfume Company was created by Charna Ethier to embrace the finest natural botanical ingredients from around the world. After spending years working for large beauty and fragrance companies, she desired to create her own line of perfumes that were truly natural.

Drawing from her youth spent in the rural farmland of New England with parents who could only be described as devout hippies, she began the slow process of becoming a natural perfumer studying the properties of botanicals and the aromas of a youth spent in the country. From the scent of maple tree sap before it's boiled into syrup to the heavenly aroma of lilacs blooming she had no lack of natural inspiration to draw upon. Combined with her penchant for luxury and artisan quality goods, Providence Perfume Co. was born.

Charna was named 2012 Natural Perfumer of the Year, and her fragrances are Fifi award nominated-the highest honor in the industry. Her perfumes have appeared in numerous publications and she has been featured on assorted media outlets espousing her passion for artisan perfume. Charna resides in Providence, RI with her family and always takes time to stop and smell the roses.

NATURAL PERFUMER

CHARNA ETHIER
PROVIDENCE, RI

For Charna Ethier, a natural perfumer and founder of Providence Perfume Co., inspiration can strike at any time. For example, she recently conceptualized a perfume while reading a bedtime story to her two children. The scent, called Gypsy, references Madeline and the Gypsies, Ludwig Bemelmans' classic children's book. "It's a mysterious perfume, with a sort of fresh, forest-inspired note," she says. "I love that I can draw creatively from anywhere."

Ethier grew up making her own cosmetics; she remembers brewing perfume from lime peels and making lipstick from crushed berries as a young girl. Last January, she upped the ante by launching her own line of all-natural fragrances. Now, she spends her days blending and filtering scents by hand, and performing sales, marketing, and public relations duties for her firm. She seems to have a knack for business: within the last month, her company's sales have more than doubled, and one of her scents was featured on AOL's homepage.

What really thrills her, though, is creating perfume. A delicious cup of chai tea recently sparked a new scent, which is still in progress. "I want it to be lighter on cinnamon and heavier on the spicy notes," she says. Ethier is in no rush to finish, though: "I love the creative process," she says. —BRIDGET HERMAN
